A few weeks back, my wife and I were able to explore the Tamara de Lempicka exhibit at the de Young Museum in San Francisco. A longtime favorite of mine, de Lempicka was a pillar in the world of Art Deco and towered as a prominent female artist in a field oft-dominated by men. One of her most famous works, Young Lady with Gloves (1929), is period-defining, and perfectly captures her use of shapes, colors, gradients, and flair…

And, here’s a close up…

Since we’re on the topic of Art Deco, here’s our first highlight for the upload—an Austrian bronze plaque from 1911…

Designed by Arnold Hartig, it was issued on the occasion of the 50th anniversary of the Viennese Association of Visual Artists.

Staying within the period, another medal in this upload evokes a bit of de Lempicka's art to come…

Though not Art Deco, this very rare medal by another prominent female artist—Elisabeth von Esseö—presents a similar feel, in that the female figure takes center stage upon the reverse. Commemorating the Russian-born but German-based dancer, Edith von Schrenck, it features the dancer among what is seemingly a countless number of angels to either side.

Moving on to some other highlights, we have the following…

GERMANY. Nürnberg. Marriage silver Medal. Issued circa 1700. NGC AU-58.

NETHERLANDS. Dutch Household Society silver Medal. Issued 1828. PCGS SP-64.

SWEDEN. Alfred Nobel silver Award Medal. Issued 1920. PCGS SP-62.

GERMANY & FRANCE. Bloodsuckers on the Rhine cast bronze Medal. Dated 1923.

GREAT BRITAIN. "Searle at Seventy" silvered bronze Medal. Issued 1990.
